

DONALD BOYD    Director

Donald is the Development Manager for the Huntly Development Trust (HDT). Trained as a Chartered Surveyor in Aberdeen, he left the North East in 1989 to work his way through Europe and the Middle East. On his return to the UK he studied Environmental Management and Community Water Supply Engineering at Cranfield University, and then spent a volunteer year helping communities in the Western Highlands of Guatemala improve their water-supply systems. A nine-year stint as a project manager with the International Institute for the Urban Environment in Delft, The Netherlands followed. In 2005, Donald returned to his hometown as Town Coordinator with the Aberdeenshire Towns Partnership and completed his MBA with the Open University. In 2009, he helped establish ATP's successor, Huntly Development Trust. Donald lives in Huntly with his wife and young son.
